and curse owners and officers. He would do no more if overworked, underfed, poorly paid and knocked down twice a day. Jack is Jack, and that ends it.

Williams had no sooner got among the men than he began telling of a great treasure buried on one of the Kurile Islands. Talk treasure to a sailor and you can bring him to mutiny. The amount of money was given at several million dollars, and Williams claimed to be able to locate the exact spot. It probably never occurred to one of the men to ask why he didn't go to the captain with his story, and try to arrange for the removal of the treasure, but if it did he had some answer at hand. He proposed taking possession of the bark, sailing her to the treasure island and securing the great wealth, and then using her to get to England. As to the officers and such men as would not join, they were to be cast adrift in mid-ocean to take their chances. We had a cargo valued at $125,000, and I think the man's game was to peddle it out among the Marine, Caroline and Marshall Islands, get what he could, and then look out for himself. So quietly did he do his work among the crew that not the slightest hint of what was going on was wafted aft. He enlisted eight of the men in his cause, and on the seventh day of his coming aboard, and while the Captain and I were eating dinner, the climax came. The second mate was seized, bound and gagged, and an alarm raised that he had fallen overboard. Both of us rushed from the cabin, to be pounced upon and made prisoners. It was a surprise all around, and no insolence was offered any of us. When Captain Holt demanded an explanation Williams enlightened him. He said:

"We are in possession of the bark. We are going after a great treasure, which is to be equally divided between man and man. It was no use to talk to you, for you would have scoffed at my story. It was agreed that none of you should be hurt, and we have kept to the agreement."

"What do you intend to do with us?"

"Send you adrift within an hour."

"Where is your treasure island?"

"I will not tell you."

"If you really know of a buried treasure, why not let us sail the ship there and share with you?"

"Because that would mean less money for the rest of us."

The Captain appealed to the men, declaring that Williams had no real knowledge of a treasure and would lead them a wild goose chase, and offered to overlook what had happened if they would return to duty. The feeling of the crew was expressed by the old boatswain, who took off his cap and stood in humble attitude as he said:

"Captain Holt, we hev' nothin' ag'in ye nor the mates, but here's a chance for every man of us to git rich, and we feels we must take it."

There was more argument, but the men were stubborn. Those who had refused to join in the plot now came forward and gave in their allegiance to Williams, and preparations were begun for casting us adrift. One of the quarter boats was hoisted out and in it were stowed water and provisions sufficient to last the three of us a fortnight. We got a mast and a sail, but neither chart, quadrant, nor compass. Could Williams have had his way about it we would have been knocked in the head or sent adrift without food, but the men were a unit for fair treatment, and he was too crafty to oppose them.

As soon as we were in the boat the bark altered her course to the south-west, and as we were left behind several of the men waved us good-bye. The moon observation had given us the latitude of Patrocinio Island, distant about 250 miles, due south, but as the weather was fine it was determined to remain in the track in hopes of being picked up, but meanwhile making what progress we could to the east. For three days we did not sight a sail. We had run over a hundred miles to the east, when at daybreak on the fourth morning, with a fresh breeze from the south, we found ourselves right in the course of a big ship bound to the east. We hoisted a signal of distress and lay to for her to come up. As she neared us we saw men aloft and knew that we were observed. She passed us not more than fifty yards away, with at least six men looking at us over the port rail, and we, of course, expected to see her come to shortly after. She kept straight on, however, and was three miles away before we realized that her inhuman captain had no intention of picking us up. The ship was the Red Prince, owned by an English firm in Yokohama, and sailed by Captain Charles Brown, and was then on a voyage to San Francisco. Had not the matter been commented on in the public press I should not advert to it here, as such conduct is rare and almost passed belief. It was not only fully reported in American journals, but when Captain Holt met Captain Brown in Yokohama three years later he sent him to the hospital with broken bones.

We had made 350 miles to the east and were having fair weather of it when we made a gressome discovery. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon we sighted a strange object only a point or two off our course, and running down to it we found our old bark floating keel upward, with two of her masts and a great mass of wreckage surrounding her. She had been struck by a sudden squall with all sail set and, though the masts had broken off, it was too late to prevent her turning turtle. There was but little sea on, and we pulled in among the wreckage, and I scrambled upon the bark's bottom. We had a faint hope that if sound below she might be righted, especially if we sighted a craft which would give us assistance. She had probably been in that position for three or four days at the least, but there was still sufficient Bishop, Editor; published monthly, at $2 per annum, devoted to the religious and educational interests of these islands, as also a record of political and other current events. Sample copies mailed to any address. A limited number of advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

The Hawaiian Annual now in its Nineteenth year, and acknowledged not only as the best authority on all information pertaining to the islands that residents should know and strangers inevitably ask, but the only reference book of Hawaiian statistics, and annual record of current and reminiscence events. There are homes probably in this land in which it is unknown, except by name, and there are numerous trends abroad to whom this publication would afford untold satisfaction for the fund of reliable information it imparts in its one hundred and fifty or more pages, with nothing of the "Guide Book" gush about it. Price per copy to any address in these islands, 75 cents; or mailed to any address in the Postal Union for 85 cents each.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with

Wampole's
Tasteless
Preparation

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.
